TWENTY-SECOND YEAR

GETTYSBURG, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1924.

PRICE TWO CENTS

GETTYSBURG BANK IS 110 YEARS OLD; OBSERVES BIRTH

Lineal Ancestor Of Judge Donald P. McPherson Was First Cashier.

The Gettysburg National Bank is observing its one hundred and tenth anniversary.

When the legislature of Pennsylvania, in 1814, passed an act, which was vetoed by the governor and re-passed over his veto, providing that the state be divided into 27 districts for banking purposes, allowing Adams county one bank, a group of business men, prominent in their day and actively identified in history with the early development of this community, immediately set the machinery in motion to organize the bank of Gettysburg.

The files of the old Adams Centinel, now the Gettysburg Star and Sentinel, which was then published by Robert Harper, contain a complete history of the organization and its progress.

Under the original plans of organization, the bank was to have not more than 7,000 shares with a par value of $50 a share, or $350,000 capital. Certain farm houses in the various districts throughout the county were designated as points to receive subscriptions and when the bank was ready for actual organization and election of officers, a total of 232 persons, whose names are on record, had subscribed an aggregate of 4,730 shares.

Election In 1814
The first minutes of the bank are still in existence. They show that at an election held May 26, 1814, the following directors were chosen:

Robert Hayes, Alexander Cobean, Ralph Lashells, Barnhart Gilbert, James Gettys, Walter Smith and Jacob Eyster, Gettysburg; Andrew Will, Littlestown; Amos McGinley, Millerstown; Michael Slagle, Conewago township; John Dickson, Strabtown; William Wierman, Latimore, and Patrick Reed, Emmitsburg, Maryland.

Just as they took steps to organize the bank when the way was provided legally by the state, so did the directors seize the opportunity to change from a state bank to a national bank when the congress of the United States passed the National Bank act on June 3, 1864. The stockholders, on November 16, 1864, voted unanimously in favor of the proposition to become a national bank. The certificate of T. Clark, controller of the currency, authorizing the bank of Gettysburg to conduct business as a national bank, is dated December 1, 1864, just sixty years ago. The number of the bank is 611.

Judge Donald P. McPherson, who was a director of the bank until he was elected president judge of the Adams-Fulton district, when he resigned on account of his judicial duties, is a lineal descendant of John Bayard McPherson, who was cashier of the bank from the time of its organization in 1814 until 1849. Judge McPherson's family had been connected with the bank for more than an entire century. The original business of the bank was conducted in the home of John B. McPherson, which was on the same site as the present modern bank building.

William Penn Lot
In this connection, it is interesting to note that the lot on which the bank building is located was conveyed by John and William Penn on April 17, 1787, to James Gettys, one of the original directors of the Bank of Gettysburg, and by him sold April 26, 1809, to William McPherson, a director from 1819 to 1824 and from whom it came to John Bayard McPherson. The present bank building was completed in 1910 at a total cost of $45,000.

I. L. Taylor, who succeeded to the cashiership of the bank upon the retirement of E. M. Bender, is a native of Menallen township and began work as a clerk in the bank December 1, 1901. Previously, he taught school nine years in Adams county. Charles W. Stock, assistant cashier, is a graduate of Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, and later was a student at the state forestry school at Mont Alto. He was appointed a clerk in the bank November 26, 1907.

H. C. Picking, treasurer of the college, is president of the bank.

NEW SEWAGE PLANT BOON TO EAST END

Decision of the voters of Gettysburg in the general election November 4 to bond the town for the erection of a new sewage disposal plant and thereby remove the stench which has annoyed residents in the vicinity of Rock Creek is expected to prove a boon to real estate development in the east end, particularly on York street.

Three fine brick dwellings are now being erected on the right side of lower York street, one each by Eugene C. Shriver, J. E. Stahl and John Colestock. Several other persons are making preparations to build residences in the same vicinity, it is reported.

The elimination of the Rock Creek nuisance is expected to see the development of East Lincoln avenue from the Harrisburg road east. This section has had an unusual growth during the last two years, a new street having just been opened off Stratton street, south of Lincoln avenue, where two new houses are now being erected.

WILL PHOTOGRAPH FIELD FROM AIR

Lieutenant Weikert Expects To Return Home Next Summer To Photograph Battleground.

Lieutenant John Weikert, who flew from Canute field, Rantoul, Illinois, to eat a Thanksgiving dinner with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Weikert, McKnightstown, motored to Baltimore this morning and was among the Gettysburgians who witnessed the Army-Navy football game at Baltimore this afternoon.

On Friday, Lieutenant Weikert, accompanied by Lieutenant S. W. Cowie, a fellow aviator, who was with him on his hop from Illinois to Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving Day, flew to Baltimore, where Lieutenant Cowie spent the night. The trip to Baltimore consumed 50 minutes. Lieutenant Weikert returned here later in the day.

Lieutenant Weikert made the trip from Canute field to his home at McKnightstown in five and one-half hours, flying time. Two stops were made en route, one at Dayton, Ohio, and the other at Moundsville, West Virginia, where the plane was refueled.

125 Miles An Hour
The aviators came in a DeHavilland 4B type plane, having a wing spread of 38 feet. The Liberty motor which furnishes the driving power is capable of developing 400-horsepower. A speed of from 80 to 125 miles an hour is developed by the machine.

Lieutenants Weikert and Cowie will leave from McKnightstown at 7 o'clock, Sunday morning, on the return trip.

Lieutenant Weikert is pursuing a course in aerial photography at Canute field. He expects to finish next July. He then hopes to fly back to Adams county again and spend two weeks at his home, at the same time making a series of pictures of the battlefield from the air.

The airplane in which the two aviators made the trip was landed in a field on the farm of Charles Hershey, one of the Adams county commissioners, near McKnightstown, where it has been attracting considerable attention.

HUNTERS READY FOR DEER DRIVE

Begin to Flock Into South Mountains For Opening of Season Monday.

Adams county deer hunters are planning to turn out en masse Monday for the opening of the season.

Already nimrods from other cities and towns in the state have begun to invade the South Mountains in Adams and Franklin counties, especially in the Caledonia section, and are primed and cocked for the break of day Monday.

It is expected that more hunters will take part in the search for big game this year than ever before. One year ago, it was estimated that 150,000 hunters spent the first two weeks of December in the mountains of the state.

The Caledonia section is one of the most popular in the state for deer hunters and the yield of kills is always large.

Legal Bag
It is estimated there will be nearly 7,000 legal bucks slain this season, and when the season closes December 15, by special license, does may be shot in some counties. These special licenses can be purchased on application by any county game warden or through the offices of the game commission.

In Pennsylvania only a male deer having two or more points to one antler or spikes six or more inches in length, measuring from top of the skull, shall be considered legal. The limit is one deer a season and six by hunting party.

But many of the big hunting clubs have adopted a policy of only shooting bucks with points on the antlers. The deer shooting pastime has become popular in this state, and each season there are more hunters taking part in the sport. It affords a lot of excitement. The popular method in Pennsylvania is to make big drives through the thickets, with shooters posted on the runs and crossings ready to draw on the buck as it is making its way from the noisy drivers.

Many In Camp
At each camp there are from ten to twenty-five hunters and the larger number of hunters taking part in the drive increase the chances of starting a buck. They shout, ring bells, blow whistles and when a drive is on it can be heard at a long distance. However, many deer are killed by the still-hunting method, which means the hunter usually hunts alone, wandering about the woods with the hope of encountering some buck which has been put in flight by a group of camp drivers.

Hours of sunrise and sunset, before and after which no hunting is allowed, for next week are as follows:

	Sunrise	Sunset
Monday	7:10	4:42
Tuesday	7:11	4:42
Wednesday	7:12	4:42
Thursday	7:13	4:42
Friday	7:14	4:42
Saturday	7:15	4:42

DEDICATE MARKER AT ZORA TODAY

Swedish Minister Fails to Come Here For Lunch, But Is Expected Back Tonight.

Although Axel Wallenberg, minister of Sweden to the United States, was expected as a luncheon guest at the Hotel Gettysburg, neither he nor any of his party from Washington put in their appearance.

Mr. Wallenberg was to make the principal address this afternoon at the unveiling and dedication of the marker on the site of the pioneer home of John Hanson Steelman, first prominent white settler, west of the Susquehanna river, near Zora, and it is believed he went direct to the scene of the dedication instead of coming to Gettysburg.

Officials at the Hotel Gettysburg said they understood he would return here tonight and spend the night in Gettysburg, but that no definite arrangements had been made for him or his party.

Colonel Henry W. Shoemaker, chairman of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission, and a party of friends ate lunch at the Hotel Gettysburg, having arrived in Gettysburg earlier in the day. Immediately after lunch, they went to the scene of the dedication.

Through illness, the Rev. Dr. Henry E. Jacobs, of Philadelphia, president of the Mount Airy Lutheran Theological Seminary, was unable to attend the exercises, and the Rev. Dr. A. R. Wentz, of the local Lutheran Theological Seminary, took his place on the program. Judge D. P. McPherson, scheduled to give one of the addresses, also informed those in charge of the exercises that he would be unable to attend.

State Spent Large Sum On Its Highways

(By Associated Press.)
Harrisburg, Nov. 29.—Total expenditures of $305,000,000 for highway purposes will be under the supervision of the department of highways during the period 1923 to 1927, William H. Connell, department engineering executive, declared in an article in the November annals of the American Academy of Political Social Science. Of this amount he said, $220,000,000 will be expended on state and county roads directly under the jurisdiction of the department. He estimated expenditures of $85,000,000 on township roads would be supervised by the department.

Mr. Connell pointed out that in 1911 and 1923 $180,000,000 was spent on the state highway system and of this sum $135,000,000 was spent between 1919 and 1923.

GIRL LEAVES ON HER WEDDING EVE

Mother Does Not Know Whether Girl Changed Mind or Whether She Was Abducted.

(By Associated Press.)

Columbus, Nov. 29.—A pretty girl, who disappeared on the night before her wedding, a worried bridegroom-to-be and a rejected suitor were the principals in a story which has come to light here and which may be placed in the hands of the police today to be unraveled.

Miss Jane Conley, 29, was to have been married Thanksgiving Day to Frank Strear, a Philadelphia real estate dealer. Wednesday night she disappeared and her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Conley, has not heard from her.

Thanksgiving morning Mrs. Conley received a telegram from Ashland, O., signed by A. C. House, who, it was said, was a jilted suitor of Jane, which read:

"Jane's absence entirely my fault. Would advise Frank not to come to house. Will write."

The question in Mrs. Conley's mind now, she said, was whether her daughter changed her mind and eloped with House or whether the latter abducted her.

STATE REVENUE FIXED BY LEWIS

Auditor General Prepares Budget Data; Will Reach $124,000,000, Says Report.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 29.—Estimated state revenues for general fund purposes for the 1925-26 biennium were placed at $124,000,000 by Auditor General Samuel S. Lewis, who made public the figures Thursday in transmitting budget data for the next biennium to Dr. Clyde L. King, secretary of the commonwealth and chief budget officer. The auditor general said $937,500 of emergency gasoline tax and $125,000 of emergency net profits' tax which will be collected during the early part of the next biennium are included in this estimate. He pointed out that the estimated revenue to be derived from other than emergency tax acts would be $120,937,500. He said this estimate was exclusive of revenues which are paid into special funds, estimated receipts of which the department now is compiling.

REVERSE MODE OF QUIZZING

Paris.—The psychology of asking school children questions is a point on which American teachers take issue with most French instructors. "Jean," says the French teacher in most schools, "Stand up!" Then the question is asked.

In American schools the process is reversed. The question is put fully, then some pupil is asked to answer it. "The difference is," said a recent visitor to Paris lycées, "that in the French school the whole class knows instantly that 'Jean' is the one to answer and the rest have no need to do any hard thinking."

"In the American school everyone in the class is compelled to search his wits for an answer because he or she may be called upon to rise. In that way the whole class answers the question, or tries to, although only one recites."

CONSTABLE TO BE "COWBOY"

Atlantic City, Nov. 2.—Hammonilton bids fair to have a "cowboy" constable in the person of Samuel Claus, Sergeant-at-Arms R. T. Russell, of the district court, having appointed him as uprmaid of a valuable Jersey cow seized in litigation.

Claus was instructed to feed, milk and put the critter to bed nightly until December 10, when the suit is heard in court. Claus brightened up when informed by Sergeant-at-Arms Russell that he might keep the milk as long as the cow was under his care.

MAKES HIS OWN DEATH PLANS

Dillsburg, Nov. 29.—Before expiring at 10:40 o'clock Wednesday night, William L. Strayer, a prominent retired farmer of this place, had made all funeral arrangements with the exception of time. He had picked the minister to officiate at the services; he had chosen the pallbearers, the place of burial and the places where services will be held. Mr. Strayer was 76 years of age.

1924 TOYS HERE DELIGHT KIDDIES

Christmas Time Is Coming, Sure Enough, Judging From Appearances In Gettysburg Stores.

Christmas time's a-coming. You can feel the excitement tingling in the air, and Santa Claus has already put in his appearance taking advance orders at several department stores. He's got to be hustling these days. Youngsters aren't satisfied any more with the same toys they had last year or the year before, and it keeps the poor old saint and all his helpers on the jump to keep up with the times in Toyland.

One of the newest ideas is that of the Famlee Doll. It's a whole family of dolls in one, because each doll has as many different heads as you want to get for it. And if Betty or Mary gets tired of one particular child, she can simply unscrew its head, screw on another on the same principle of changing an electric light bulb, and presto! instead of a little girl doll, she'll have a freckled faced little boy. Change his costume, and everything's complete.

There's a walking doll in Gettysburg's Toyland this year, too, the first real walking doll that's ever been in Toyland anywhere, so says his manager. It was invented by a man in Massachusetts, and will walk a distance of sixty feet by just being wound up once. This particular doll was a miniature Charlie Chaplin, and handled his feet in real Charlie Chaplin style.

And, to finish up with the doll family, there's a tiny, weeny baby doll, with a funny little screwed up face, that cries a funny little wail, the same as a brand new baby. There are doll's houses, too, real homes for the entire family, with lace curtains at the pretty windows, and doors that open hospitably for everybody in Toyland to enter. There's a garage just back of the little home, same as the one Daddy has, where the man of the doll house can store his car that Santa will bring him Christmas morning.

As to games, there's the crossword puzzles that seems to have taken the whole country by storm. Santa Claus has been forced to add that to his list of gifts for even small children this year, and he's devised a simplified form for the little tots, but which the grown-ups will quite likely enjoy as much as any of the youngsters will.

There's a kind of "merry-go-round" hunting game, too, that will enable you to shoot any number of wild animals as they fly past you, without incurring any of the dangers of being shot at yourself while out in the woods.

There's a queer little fortune-telling affair, for those who'd like to dip into the mystic future, worked upon very much the same principle as the Ouija board is, only in this one you write your question, and the answer is warranted "never to fail." There are toy vacuum cleaners for the busy little housewives of the city, there are toy typewriters that really write, there are barking dogs and meowing cats, and just about anything and everything that a modern child with a healthy imagination could ever wish for.

COUPLE WEDS THANKSGIVING PLAN TO LOWER ALL ROAD SIGNS

Miss Ethel Maria Peters And Walter G. Slaybaugh Are Married In Shippensburg.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Thanksgiving evening at 6:30 o'clock, when Miss Ethel Maria Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Peters, Biglerville, became the bride of Walter G. Slaybaugh, son of Harry E. Slaybaugh, Aspers. The ceremony was performed at the United Brethren parsonage at Shippensburg, by the Rev. J. C. Coulson, presiding elder of the Pennsylvania United Brethren Conference. The ring ceremony of the United Brethren was used.

The bride wore a dress of light cocoa silk bengeline with hat to match and carried a corsage bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

They were attended by Miss Martha G. Coulson and Miss Ruth M. Hershey, of Shippensburg.

The bride attended the Biglerville High School and later was employed in the office of the Commercial Furniture Co., Hagerstown.

The bridegroom attended the Arendtsville Vocational School and the Shippensburg State Normal School. Mr. and Mrs. Slaybaugh will reside in York in the near future where the bridegroom is employed.

WOMAN REPORTED DEAD; REVIVES

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 29.—After the heart and pulse of Mrs. George W. Spalding, of Hamilton, O., apparently had ceased to function at the Western Maryland Hospital, here, where she was taken last night, the husband, a guest at the Pennsylvania Hotel, was notified of her death.

Upon his arrival at the hospital Mrs. Spalding suddenly revived and is now said to be out of danger. Mrs. Spalding attributed her illness to fright caused by reckless autoists on the national highway between Cumberland and Frostburg.

MOTORISTS COMPLAIN TO HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT THAT NEW LIGHTS DO NOT STRIKE ROAD.

The cross-road puzzle of those motorists who have been observing the new state regulations on legal lights is to be solved at last.

The State Highway Department announced last night that signs showing directions are to be built closer to the ground.

Ever since the new regulations demanding lights in proper focus, throwing the rays of light upon the road instead of among the tree-tops, have been in effect, the department has received complaints that the signs are too high to catch the rays of the properly-adjusted lights. It is only the drivers of those cars whose lights still shine upon the roadside telegraph wires, who are able to read the signs without dismounting from their cars, the complaints said.

Not wishing to nullify its own regulations, the department has decided to place the signs twelve to fifteen inches nearer to the ground than they now are. This change will place the signs about four feet above the ground, and within reach of the rays of properly adjusted headlights.

"Of course, it will take some time," the highway officials said, "because between 10,000 and 15,000 signs will have to be changed."

The changes, they said, will begin "as soon as possible."

Pittsburgh, Nov. 29.—After drilling for 30 months engineers in charge of a test well near Latrobe struck gas at a depth of 7428 feet, the deepest well in the world. Gas is flowing at the rate of 500,000 cubic feet a day. The total cost of sinking the well was estimated at $200,000.

Roy D. Lawver

Biglerville, Pa.

"So that is your little protégé?" she remarked.

"That is she," Christopher admitted.

"I do not wish to seem a prude," Mary continued, "or anything else disagreeable, but do you really think that you are doing the right thing, Christopher, in sitting about on the terrace with a peasant girl dressed—er—according to her position? The whole escapade, I think, is ridiculous. I am not so surprised at Gerald but I am surprised at you."

Christopher was conscious of some irritation. He liked and admired Lady Mary, but it seemed to him that her attitude was a little unsympathetic.

"I can quite understand the whole incident seeming ill-advised," he admitted, "but, looking back at it, I honestly cannot see what else we could have done."

"You could have left the girl where she was," Mary insisted.

Christopher shook his head.

"You didn't see her," he replied.

"No one could have left her. No actress could have simulated the horror we saw shining out of her face. I don't think that I should ever have thought of bringing her away—it was Gerald who did that—but I think that he was right, and I should never consent to sending her back unless she were willing to go."

"And exactly what do you two young men propose to do with her, then?" Mary inquired. "It is not you I am so much afraid of. It is Gerald."

"But you don't believe—" he began.

"I believe that Gerald's intentions are always good," she interrupted; "he is capable, even, of idealism. On the other hand, he is fatally weak, especially where women are concerned. I fancy," she went on, "you will find that you have assumed a dual responsibility, and I fancy, too, that some day you will be sorry for it. Gerald has the spirit of the philanthropist in his blood. If the girl attracts him sufficiently, you, at any rate—sadly probably he—will be sorry you did not leave her to her village lover."

"You have described Gerald correctly when you called him a philanthropist," Christopher admitted. "I put myself in court, and on his behalf I pleaded guilty to the charge. On the other hand, I have greater faith in his kindness of heart and his sense of honor than you seem to have. This child is helpless and innocent. For that reason I believe that she will be as safe with Gerald as with me."

Lady Mary sighed. The look of trouble still lingered in her eyes.

"I hope that you may be right," she said. "I am not a superstitious person, but I have some sort of foreboding about that child. I feel that she is going to bring trouble, somehow or other."

Chapter IV

It is a fact that when the two young men re-entered the establishment of Madame Lenore, they both failed utterly to recognize the girl who was standing in a distant corner, talking to the proprietress. It was not until she detached herself and came hesitatingly up to them that they realized with varying sensations, who she was. Gerald laughed with pleasure and held out both his hands. Christopher's admiration was tempered with a certain amount of distinct disapprobation.

"Well, what does Milord think?" Madame demanded.

"My congratulations!" Gerald replied enthusiastically. "My dear Myrtle, I wonder if you realize how charming you are?"

The girl looked shyly up at Gerald, her face soft and eloquent with pleasure.

She was clad in a fine white serge costume, trimmed with silver braid. Her lace blouse was delicately filmy and transparent, the cut of her skirt as graceful as the last word from Paris had decreed; her white silk stockings and suede shoes, procured from a neighboring establishment, irreproachable; her large hat, a gossamer-like confection of tulle and lace. Of the charm of her appearance there could be no possible question, but, in exact proportion with Gerald's satisfaction, Christopher's disapproval seemed to grow.

"I do not criticize your clothes, madame, or your taste," he said, "but we have given you the wrong idea. Mademoiselle is in search of a situation. She is a working girl for whose future I am anxious to provide. Those clothes are entirely unsuitable."

"Look here, Chris," Gerald interrupted, "you're taking this thing too seriously. We know very well that Myrtle must be found something to do later on, but in the meantime she may as well have a little fun. Can't you see for yourself how wonderful she is? She will puzzle the whole of Monte Carlo for a week."

"And after then?" Christopher asked.

Gerald turned impatiently away.

Madame held up a wonderful confection of white lace and silk.

"This is what I figure to myself for mademoiselle's first evening frock," she said,—"this and a hat of black lace, with a string of pearls which I could perhaps borrow. I promise you that she would make a sensation you do not dream of."

"It is not our wish that she make a sensation of this sort," Christopher persisted harshly. "It appears to me that you both wish to provide the child—"

"He stopped short. Gerald's eyes were filled with sudden fire; the girl was trembling."

"You're talking like an ass, Christopher," Gerald declared. "This is my affair."

"It is nothing of the sort," Christopher rejoined stubbornly. "It is our affair. I claim an equal right in disposing of Myrtle, and I will not have her decked out in these clothes. What we need for her is a plain blue serge suit and a small hat. She will always look charming, she will always be attractive, but nothing in her future walk of life justifies our arraying her in clothes like these."

Madame shrugged her shoulders more disparagingly than ever.

"It is as mild and monsieur desires, of course," she said. "I can provide such garments as monsieur describes."

Gerald looked at Myrtle once more. The admiration in his eyes this time, at any rate, was absolutely genuine.

"I can't see the harm in having the child properly turned out for, say, one week," he protested, turning to Christopher.

"And at the end of that week, what?"

There was a deadly directness about Christopher's gaze. Gerald, although there was no definitely formed thought of evil in his mind, avoided it.

"If you are proposing to marry Myrtle," Christopher continued, "then the clothes you have selected are suitable. Unless you have made up your mind to do that, I beg that madame will show us something different."

There was a somewhat hectic silence for several moments. Madame Lenore could scarcely conceal her contempt for the crudeness of this puritanical Englishman. Myrtle herself felt as though a dream of paradise were fading away. Gerald, because he was good fellow enough at heart, felt further insistence impossible. He was quite content to drift into danger; he was not casuist enough to evade a plain warning.

"Well, I suppose we shall have to let this disagreeable fellow have his way," he declared. "Take her along, madame, and see what you can do. You hear my friend's idea—plain blue serge buttoned up to the throat, cashmere stockings and square-toed shoes."

"There will be a compromise," madame declared firmly. "And for the rest, little one, do not trouble too much," she whispered, as she led Myrtle away. "I shall keep these clothes just as they are, until the other gentleman has made up his mind to meddle no longer. Come to me when you are ready. I can make you look so that Milord will take notice of no other woman."

"There Will Be a Compromise," Madame Declared Firmly.

Myrtle's eyes were swimming with tears.

"It was just for him that I wanted to keep these clothes," she said. "I wanted him to take me out and to feel that I looked like other girls. As for Monsieur Christopher, I detest him!"

FASTING FOR YOUTH

The fountain of youth is fasting, according to Professor Carlson of the department of physiology of the University of Chicago.

He applies the treatment in doses of 15 days, trying it on himself as well as his subjects. After that period, he says, there is a remarkable increase in the "rate of metabolism." That is, the bodily cells and tissues undergo vital changes more rapidly, instead of remaining stagnant as they do normally in old age. Food is digested and assimilated better. This improvement lasts after the temporary loss of food has been made up and the body has returned to normal weight. The body is renewed like that of a child or a youth, recovering quickly from exhaustion and having all its processes speeded up.

Many a person eager for the benefits will shy at the means of attaining them. Professor Carlson, however, insists that fasting is not painful. The body may be temporarily weakened, he says, but there is no unpleasant mental reaction, and the faster doesn't feel so hungry after the first two or three days.

So we're probably in for a starvation craze now. But the grocers and butchers needn't worry. The patients will eat more than ever when they get their metabolism straightened out.

THE BOOTLEGGER PAYS

A widow in Syracuse, New York, is awarded a verdict of $1,500 against a cafe keeper who is accused of selling her husband liquor. After drinking the liquor, the husband went out and killed himself, which is no uncommon result of imbibing current alcoholic beverages.

This is said to be the third verdict of the kind returned in Syracuse in the last two years, under a state law which makes liquor salesmen responsible for the acts of purchasers. It may be an unwarranted invasion of the sacred rights of bootleggers; but if such a law were generally adopted and enforced, it would add mightily to the efficacy of prohibition.

With The EditorSMULL'S HAND BOOK
DROPS SOME FEATURES

Smull's Legislative Hand Book has passed from private to public ownership. In fact, it is Smull's no longer.

With the change, the handy reference book concerning matters of state at Harrisburg loses some of its best features, including the directory of state employees which will not appear in the new edition.

The handbook, which has been purchased by the state, will now be known as the Pennsylvania State Manual. The first edition in charge of the Pinchot administration, expected last spring, is expected to appear about the time the Legislature convenes, early in January.

Probably the most important feature of Smull's in the past has been the complete list of state employees. They have been listed by departments. In addition there was an alphabetical directory of all the employees in the back of the book.

JUST FOLKS

By Edgar A. Quinn

THE PRINCE OF WALES

The Prince of Wales was born to rule, and he is young and strong. And he is fond of comradeship, its laughter and its song, And he would like to walk with men beneath a starry sky.

But, oh, he may not choose his friends the same as you and I. The Prince of Wales is fond of golf, the game is good to play, But guards must follow him about to keep the throng away. On many a care-free golfing man he casts a longing eye, But, oh, he may not play a match the same as you and I.

The Prince of Wales was born to rule, some day he'll be a king, But 'round about him everywhere he hears the hammers ring.

And he may long for tasks to do, for far-flung goals to try, But, oh, he may not go to work the same as you and I.

The Prince of Wales has wealth and power, yet richer far are we, The wives who wait for us at home are those we long to see, And he may wish to wed a maid the royal fates deny, But, oh, he may not choose his wife the same as you and I.

The Prince of Wales may wear a crown and add to England's fame, But never shall such liberty as ours be his to claim.

And many a night and many a day he'll look at us to sigh, Because he may not live his life the same as you and I.

shot administration, there have been countless changes in personnel, as well as a multitude of changes in titles under the provisions of the reorganization code. This directory, the only means of obtaining a correct list of employees and their titles, will be missed especially because the last complete directory was published during the Sprout administration, and many of those officeholders have disappeared from the Capitol months ago.

Only the chief officials and their titles will be carried by the new book.

GETTYSBURG WILL HAVE
CHAUTAUQUA NEXT SUMMER

Gettysburg will have a Chautauqua next summer for the first time in some years. A representative of the Radcliff organization recently succeeded with little difficulty in getting a sufficient number of guarantors among Gettysburg business and professional men to assure a course of entertainments here extending over a week.

The program, the dates and other matters of detail will be worked out and announced later, it is stated.

PARKING PROBLEM HERE
DESERVING OF THOUGHT

Many complaints are heard about parking conditions and arrangements on Gettysburg streets, particularly on Saturday nights. The wonder of it is that there are not more serious accidents.

Complainants point out that the system of parking now in vogue is extremely dangerous—much more so than is the system used in most towns of parking parallel with the curb.

Under the present plan of parking, it is barely possible for two automobiles to pass on any of the streets leading into center square. Any one car moving out from its parking place with another car coming up the street close to it is bound to lead to a crash. Many mishaps are narrowly averted on the streets every Saturday night.

No criticism of this condition is due any individual or group, but the parking problem is one that needs a great deal of thought and consideration, it is pointed out, and with the number of automobiles ever increasing, the problem is bound to become more serious.

CALM SHOULD PERVADE
FAMILY DINNER TABLE

Meal time should be a period of pleasant, relaxed calm. Appetites and nutrition both are best in such an atmosphere.

Family disputes at the dinner table are often a cause of chronic nervous loss of appetite, says Dr. Harold A. Rosenbaum in the December "Hygeia", a health magazine published by the American Medical Association. So too are scoldings, coaxings, and nagging.

"Most of us can recall situations in our lives when eating was a purely mechanical process because we were affected by some great emotion: fear, grief or remorse. Concentration on an all absorbing accomplishment loss of appetite results. Once this pernicious condition is present, it may take weeks and months of understanding correction before the child improves."

OF HISTORICAL SPLENDOR

Gettysburg will long remember one character appearing in D. W. Griffith's "America" which comes to the Lincoln Way Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday. Milton Nobles, who once appeared here in person, playing in John W. Golden's "Lightning". He will be seen again in "America", in his favorite role, that of an old patriot.

President Calvin Coolidge is not noted as a theatre-goer. Even in the days when as Governor of Massachusetts, he occupied a modest room at the Adams House in the heart of Boston's theatre section, he was seldom seen at a playhouse.

But there is one motion picture in which he is interested, and that is "America," the big romantic film of the American Revolution.

Newspaper correspondents at the White House relate that not only did President Coolidge confer with Griffith about the making of "America," but that the austere and silent chief executive asked the producer for a number of still pictures of scenes from "America," to show the home folks up in Vermont. This betokens an unprecedented enthusiasm on the part of the President where motion pictures are concerned.

When one learns, however, that "America," was filmed under the guidance of a special corps of research experts and historians, including representatives of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Sons of the American Revolution, The Lexington Historical Society, and similar organizations; that Secretary of War Weeks assisted by turning over various regular army units, who appear in costume in the massive battle scenes; and that Griffith used historic houses, actual battle grounds and the shrines of American liberty for the scenes, descendants of the leading families of Revolutionary Days as extra people, and drums, pistols, flintlocks, and even uniforms which saw service in the War of Independence as properties, the interest of even the President becomes understandable.

Because of its splendor and historical significance, this picture bids fair to attract more than the usual theatre-goers and movie enthusiasts to the Lincoln Way next Wednesday and Thursday.

BREAD PRICE IS HIGH IN PARIS

Paris.—Meat consumption in France has increased three fold since the war; French livestock is insufficient to meet the demand, and the general public has manifested a dislike for frozen meat. Such are the facts that have been brought out by the investigation ordered by the government in its campaign to bring down the cost of living.

Hence an increase in the importation of live animals is recommended, and 60,000 sheep will come to France from the River Plate, in South America.

The report of the investigators calls bread sells in Paris today at a higher price than any time since the war of 1870.

The mightiest lever known to the moral world is imagination.

First it is courtship and then courthouse. A good scare is a great help in developing the morals. Woman's greatest calamity is to be loved by the wrong man. Very few things happen to you without your own assistance. Generosity is a simple matter of giving away things you have no use for. GERMANY'S MEAT EATERS DEMAND FANCY CUTTINGS

Berlin.—It pays German cattle breeders today to fatten their cattle, something that has not been true since the war. Fat cattle on the hoof bring up to 30 cents a pound, and hogs as high as 37 cents. During the inflation period few farmers cared to bother about fattening their livestock, partly because the price of feed was so high, and he cause the German people were so happy at having anything to eat at all that they did not lay much emphasis upon especially choice cuts. With the return of stable conditions there has come a demand for choice meats, and farsighted farmers are giving much time and thought to the feeding of cattle.

WEAK, RUN DOWN AFTER SICKNESS

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Mrs. Dube Well and Strong

E. Hartford, Conn.—"After a severe sickness I was so weak that I could not do my housework, so my mother told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The first bottle helped me so much that I took six more bottles and felt fine. I have just given birth to a nice baby girl and am feeling strong and well. So different from the way I felt before. I am taking the Vegetable Compound right along while nursing. The baby seems to be in good health, and my friends say they see a big change for the better in me."—Mrs. EUGENE DUBE, 69 Woodbridge Street, East Hartford, Connecticut.

The Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine to bring back health and strength. Many mothers have found this true, as did Mrs. Dube. Ask some of your neighbors and friends, for there are women everywhere who know by experience the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chats with your GAS man

HE executives of gas companies met the other day in convention and heard from the lips of a domestic science expert that an increase in home cooking might easily cut in half the number of divorces and unhappy homes in America.

She said too many women rush home at five minutes to six from the club or from the movies to serve a hastily prepared meal from cans or warmed over food. Others, she continued, live on the delicatessen, while still others have formed the dining-out habit.

The remedy for this, everyone agreed, was a general movement back to the home kitchen and the family dining table, with the gas companies of the country showing the way.

And the gas companies are going to do it!
